

ESCAP's RTA text database

ESCAP's RTA text database is an XML repository of over 460 preferential trade agreements concluded globally since 1948. The original set of XML files was derived from UNCTAD's Texts of Trade Agreements (ToTA) project.¹ This set was updated, modified, and expanded to cover a much longer list of trade agreements and a wider scope of metadata.

For each RTA, the database includes a set of metadata², as well as full main text of a treaty and texts of annexes to that treaty containing additional substantive provisions only (in English). The database does not include supplementary or parallel texts associated with trade agreements. Texts of the recently adopted digital trade or digital economy agreements are also included separately and are marked as "supplementary/sectoral" texts.

ESCAP's RTA text database is continuously updated and expanded.³ Completeness of RTA coverage is regularly checked against the data available through Regional Trade Agreements database of the WTO \(WTO RTA DB\), and Asia-Pacific Trade and Investment Agreement Database \(APTIAD\), as well as from the official websites of government institutions, with special focus on Asia Pacific region.

² Metadata includes information related to the treaties (title, parties to the treaty, dates of signature, enforcement and end of implementation, as well as data on individual party accessions and withdrawals, etc.), coverage by other databases, or the XML file itself. For the full description of metadata covered refer to Annex 1 of User guide on UNESCAP Regional Trade Agreement text analyzer 1.0

As of 4 July 2023, ESCAP's trade agreement text database covers 463 RTAs listed below:
